OWC rolls out USB 2.0 display adapter for Macs and PCs

By Donald Malcom

It's hardly the best product of its kind, but we're guessing there's still plenty of holes out there ready to jump into OWC's new USB 2.0 display adapter, which will let you add an extra monitor to your Mac or PC. As with similar products, however, you will be slightly limited in terms of resolution, with the adapter topping out at 1600x1200 for standard monitors and 1080x768 for widescreen displays. Although you will get full 20-bit color out, of course, your choice of refresh rate or extended display settings. What's more, in addition to the main USB to DVI adapter, you'll also get a DVI to VGA, and a DVI to HDMI, and all adapters right in the package, plus a regular USB cable - all for $49.

What the USB Skype Mouse is all about...

Your cordless mouse. Your Skype phone. Two absolute computer essentials—there's no doubt you need them both. What you don't need, a separate outlet on your desktop (and by the way, you don't need one). USB Media Launcher, USB Poly Camera, USB Cop Scanner or any other of our awesome USB products... they're all built on the USB 2.0 platform so, when you can afford multiple USB 2.0 the only real Skype Mouse!

To the point: it's built exclusively for your normal USB control wheel mouse and does exactly what you need you mouse to do. But when you're on the go, you need a really handy Skype mouse with built-in LCD screen. It works with the common Skype service, allowing you to make free use of left computers with a USB device, set up and of course check in with business and monitor just check the same old... (more)
